The virtual conclusion of the Burlington and Quincy-Northern Pacific deal and the prospects for a strong showing by the banks in their weekly statement tomorrow appeared to be among the main influences in the dealings.

London furnished a higher range of prices for American stocks, notably for St. Paul, which was quoted at an advance of over 1 per cent above parity with New York's final figures. The steel stocks were also very strong there, on account of the settlement of the threatened labor troubles at Pittsburg. Foreign houses were active dealers on both sides of the local market.

There was nothing in the Stock Market this morning to suggest that the bull movement is over, or anything like it. Prices advanced sharply over night in the best classes of securities al lover the list. The gains were general, and not in one or two securities as they have been at times during the past month. The buying was enthusiastic, and in all except one or two securities it was much stronger than the realizing and short selling. The early gains were well held. Moreover while there was activity nearly everywhere there was also noticeable a natural and healthy shift of interest from Burlington ties, where the next deal may occur, and ple say will combine to offset the efpeople say will combine to offset the effect of the Burlington deal, and to the Atchisons and Pennsylvania on account of the talk of Pennsylvania purchases of the Atchisons. This transfer of interest indicates that there is still a careful leadership in the market and that it has ammunition still in readiness when necessary for its bull campaign.

Such evidences of strength naturally confound the bears. They are utterly without precedent. There is, however, o nreason to withdraw from the conservative position held by many people that prices in the high-priced railway securities generally are dangerously high, and that these securities should be sold by their holders on all bulges. As has been pointed

There seems now to be no further doubt that the terms of the Burlington deal are $200 in 4 per cent bonds for one share o stock. The large Burlington stockhold stock. The large Burlington stockholders have accepted these terms from Mr. Hill, and although the matter is to be referred formally to the stockholders generally it is inconceivable that they will make any objection. This is given out on the authority of the Burlington officers themselves. It is stated further that J. C. Morgan & Co. have agreed to underwrite $50,000,000 of the bonds at par. According to this official statement it would be difficult to understand why Burlington has not advanced to 200 before now except for one thing. Probably it will spurt up to that price at some time during the mext few days, if only for a short time. It may go higher for the sake of the Northern Pacific bonds. The reason why Burlington will not sell permanently at 200 is that there are an immense number of stockholders that would rather get anything like that price than take the chance of a later stampede to seil.

strongest features of the market this morning. This was due undoubtedly to the talk of a likely combination between these lines as an offset to the Burlington-Northern Pacific deal. Union Pacific, moreover, is said by railway financiers to be worth more, intrinsically, than Northern Pacific. Its earnings are great-
